

Partnership - Taxation

- A partnership must obtain an EIN.
- The partnership itself is merely a conduit for income tax purposes.
- Although a partnership has to file its own federal income tax return (Form 1065), the business itself is not taxed.
- Net income or loss flows through to the partners, generally in proportion to their percentage of ownership.
- Each partner reports his or her share of partnership income or loss on Schedule E of his or her Form 1040.
- Partners are taxed on their share of partnership taxable income or loss, which do not necessarily coincide with the amounts distributed to them by the partnership.
- Income to partners that is not in the nature of wages is not subject to self employment taxes. However, distributions that are for services rendered are subject to self employment taxes.
- If the partnership has employees, the partnership must withhold income taxes, Social Security, and Medicaid from its employees' wages.
- Partnership must pay FUTA, Social Security, and Medicaid.
- Partnership also may have to pay sales and use taxes
