

Anatomy of an Econometric Modelling

1. Provide a statement of theory or hypothesis

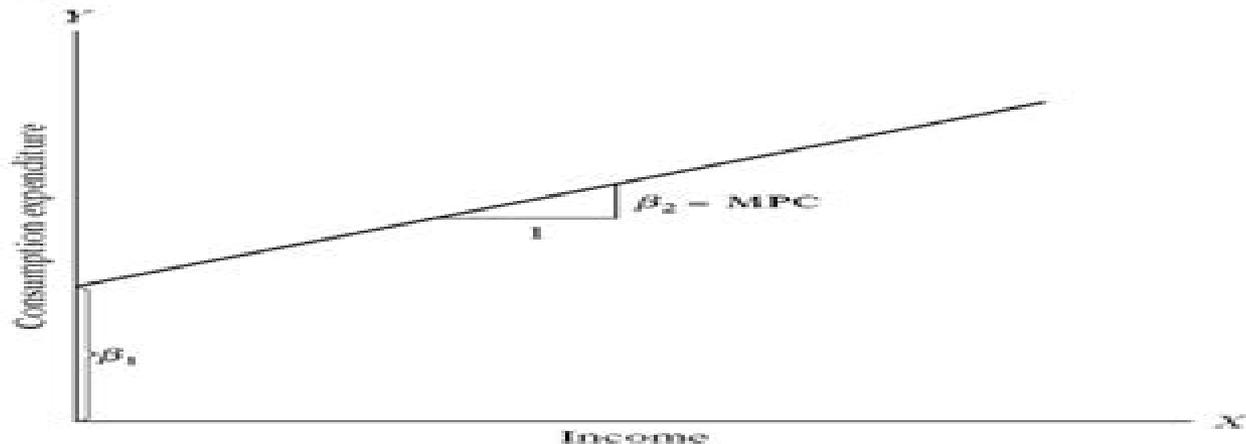

Theory: The fundamental psychological law . . . is that men [women] are disposed, as a rule and on average, to increase their consumption as their income increases, but not as much as the increase in their income.

- marginal propensity to consume (MPC)

2. Specifying a Mathematical model

$$Y = \beta_1 + \beta_2 X \quad 0 < \beta_2 < 1$$

where Y = consumption expenditure and X = income, and where β_1 and β_2 , known as the parameters of the model, are, respectively, the intercept and slope coefficients.

3. Specification of the Econometric Model of Consumption

- The relationships between economic variables are generally inexact. In addition to income, other variables affect consumption expenditure. For example, size of family, ages of the members in the family, family religion, etc., are likely to exert some influence on consumption.
- To allow for the inexact relationships between economic variables, is modified as follows:
- $Y = \beta_1 + \beta_2 X + u$
