ABSTRACT

The study included 168 students made up of 77 males and 91 females from four Departments in the School, ranging between the age of 16 – 20 years. The results revealed that family environment has no effect on Academic performance of the student; also there is no gender difference in school adjustment and academic performance of the participants. However, in cons tract, family environment has effect on school adjustment. This finding suggests the need for parents to pay attention on their relationship with children while in school as it may has effect on them negatively.

INTRODUCTION

Much concern has been drawn on the extent to which adjustment problem and poor academic performance among a significant numbers of health technology students become pressing issue facing health education. The concerns need to be studied in detail and solutions need to be built into the curriculum in order to help students with such difficulties.

In the attend, different forms of researches have been carried on the difficulty in learning in school but little done in the area of comparing family environment, school adjustment problems and academic achievement among students in tertiary institutions. And it is an area that requires serious attention. This is because people have different family orientations, which has to do with their behaviors either to be good or bad. This includes how to cope with situations they come across in their daily lives and adjust to the expected behavior or task required of them.

Family environment appears to influence school adjustment as well as academic performance. Families in general and parents in particular, have often been deemed to be the most important support system available to the child. The strongest factor in molding a child's personality or behavior is his relationship with his parents. Students who have struggled academically in most cases are at higher risk of school avoidance, and ultimately dropping out, than those who are successful. Ideally school is a place that makes students feel competent and successful, which breeds motivation and self-confidence. For the struggling students, however, school is often a place that only serves to reinforce his already low self-esteem. He does not see himself as a "good student" nor does he believe it is possible for him to ever become a good student, especially if he has participated in past interventions that have only proven to be frustrating and unsuccessful. The student attempts to avoid these feelings of failure by staying home (Lynton and Romney, 1992).

This study has investigated the perception of family environment and its influence on school adjustment. It has also investigated the effect of parent – student's relationship on academic performance in School. And it has estimated the rate of poor adjustment among students in health institutions. Lastly it has investigated the effect of gender on the adjustment in school environment.

The findings of this study are additional information to the existing relationship between students, lecturers, parents of the students and student behavioral problems in Nigerian schools. It has also identified critical areas for the improvement of academic performance and coping strategies among students in Nigeria institutions. And also the study can be consider as an important material for further studies.

In order to ensure focus on this study the following hypotheses were formulated.

1. Family environment will likely significantly impact on academic performance.
2. There will be a likely significant effect of family environment on school adjustment.

Background of the Study Modern age is the age of competition in all walks of life either it is academic or vast arena of non academic fields Therefore success in every field is determined by performance The concept of performance refers to how well the given task is completed against the set standards Everywhere there is high competition in the working world which is increasingly growing day by day The importance of doing well in schools has caught the attention of everyone in all spheres of life including parents teachers legislators and government education departments etc Although simple education is necessarily very important but not the only road to success in the competitive world However quality of performance in academic achievement and thereafter continuous quality effort to achieve the goals and objectives are instrumental for performance at par with standards to meet the challenges Much effort has been made to identify track and encourage the progress of students in schools Parents have to care about their child s performance in school because they believe good academic results will provide better career choices success and job security Performance in school is evaluated in a number of ways For regular performance assessment student demonstration of their understanding and knowledge in written and oral tests performance in presentations completion of homework assignments participation in class activities and discussions are and finally achievement scores usually considered as performance criteria Teachers evaluate it in the form of grades to describe how well a student has done Grading system came into existence in the late Victorian period and was initially criticized due to high subjectivity Different teachers valued different aspects of learning more than others although some standardization was attempted in order to make the system fairer the problem still continued The performance especially of students in studies is most likely determined by family environment emotional maturity and educational encouragement which all initially come from the family environment Here it is important to mention that the phenomenon of educational encouragement has not been studied especially in the Indian context which to the present investigator seems to be very important for students motivation and thereby attaining high performance With these above deliberations it is necessary to go further to undertake each and every variable for a comprehensive discussion that follows in the writings to proceed Chapter 1 Introd Influence of Family and School Environment on Academic Performance Nelson Mbarushimana, 2015-12-07 Decrease in the academic performance in many secondary schools continues to be observed every year at the release of the results of Rwanda National Examinations This is definitely not a good trend especially for a country like Rwanda that has a vision of education to accomplish by the year 2015 Numbers of studies have found that family and school environment of schools are the key factors of success or failure of the school. It is against this background that the need for this study was envisaged. The general objective of this study was to investigate on the perception of students and head teachers on the influence of family and school environment on academic performance in private secondary schools in Kigali city. Therefore school environment was found to affect academic performance of students than family environment. In view of the results obtained from this study Understanding International Students' Academic Performance in Top Chinese Universities Lazarus Obed Livingstone Banda, Jin Liu, 2025-02-19 Combining theory and case studies this book explores the factors that influence the academic success of international students in China. It emphasizes the importance of cultural understanding and tailored support systems in improving academic outcomes. The authors utilize the Social Cognitive Theory (SCT) to examine how students' academic outcomes are shaped by personal, environmental, and behavioral factors, especially given the unique challenges in a rapidly globalizing educational environment. Using a mix of quantitative and qualitative methodologies, this book investigates various aspects of academic performance, including motivation, self-regulation, and cultural adaptation. A key focus is the application of Attribution Theory, which studies how students' beliefs about the causes of their academic success or failure affect their motivation and behavior. The authors also discuss the impact of institutional factors such as faculty support and the quality of educational resources on student performance. The title will appeal to scholars and students interested in student mobility, student performance, Chinese education, and international education in China. It also serves as a valuable read for educators and policymakers relevant to the context of China's increasing prominence as a destination for international education.
