Preventing Occupational Falls Red Dot Publications,2024 The manual outlines the requirements and guidelines for fall protection during residential construction as per OSHA standards The document emphasizes the importance of providing fall protection to employees working at heights of 6 feet or more above a lower level The manual covers civilian and military setting The manual discusses the two primary methods of fall protection guardrail systems and personal fall arrest systems Guardrail systems are physical barriers erected along the edges of elevated surfaces to prevent falls They consist of a top rail midrail and toeboard The OSHA requirements for guardrail systems include the top rail being 42 inches above the working surface the midrail being positioned midway between the top rail and the working surface the guardrail system being able to withstand a force of at least 200 pounds applied in any downward or outward direction and the guardrail system being free from any sharp or protruding objects that could cause injury Personal fall arrest systems on the other hand are designed to arrest or stop a worker s fall should they lose balance or encounter a fall hazard They typically consist of a full body harness a connecting device such as a lanyard or lifeline and an anchorage point If a worker falls the connecting device absorbs the energy of the fall and prevents them from hitting the lower level Personal fall arrest systems provide individual protection and are used when other fall protection measures such as guardrails are not feasible or do not provide adequate protection

The manual also discusses safety net systems which are another option for fall protection during residential construction. Safety nets are installed below the working area to catch workers in the event of a fall. OSHA requires safety nets to meet certain specifications including the ability to catch a falling worker and be installed with enough clearance to prevent contact with the surface or structures below. In addition to the specific requirements for fall protection during residential construction, the manual highlights the importance of training resources for fall protection. OSHA provides various guidelines and resources to help employers provide training to their employees. The OSHA Construction Industry Outreach Training Program is a comprehensive training program that covers fall protection and other safety topics. Additionally, OSHA's website offers a wide range of educational materials including fact sheets, videos, and guides specifically addressing fall protection training. Employers can also consider hiring qualified trainers or safety consultants who specialize in fall protection to provide on-site training. The manual emphasizes the crucial role of fall protection in ensuring the safety of workers during residential construction. It outlines the specific requirements for fall protection, including guardrail systems, personal fall arrest systems, and safety net systems, and highlights the importance of proper training and resources to ensure compliance with OSHA standards.

Carpentry and Building Construction William P. Spence, 1999. Carpentry Building Construction is a comprehensive collection of information for do-it-yourselfers. It serves not only as an excellent introduction for novices to various projects but also as a valuable reference guide for more experienced carpenters. Workforce Safety United States. Congress. House. Committee on Education and the Workforce. Subcommittee on Workforce Protections, 2012. Fall Protection in Construction, 1998. In the construction industry in the U.S., falls are the leading cause of worker fatalities. Each year, on average, between 150 and 200 workers are killed, and more than 100,000 are injured as a result of falls at construction sites. OSHA recognizes that accidents involving falls are generally complex events frequently involving a variety of factors. Consequently, the standard for fall protection deals with both the human and equipment-related issues in protecting workers from fall hazards. For example, employers and employees need to do the following: Where protection is required, select fall protection systems appropriate for given situations; Use proper construction and installation of safety systems; Supervise employees properly; Use safe work procedures; Train workers in the proper selection, use, and maintenance of fall protection systems.

Guide to Developing a Fall Protection Program, 1998. Fall Prevention Training Guide U.S. Department of Labor, Occupational Safety and Health Administration, 2014-02-26. Falls cause more deaths in construction than any other hazard. In 2011, falls accounted for over a third of the 721 total construction deaths. Workers performing tasks 6 feet or more above lower levels are at risk of fatal falls or serious injuries. This training guide will help you plan how to prevent injuries and fatalities from falls among your crew and provide training to your workers It includes the following tools Instructions for using the Toolbox Talks to train workers in fall prevention A series of Toolbox Talks about various fall prevention topics Preventing falls can mean the difference between life and death Hundreds of workers die from falls each year You can prevent such deaths by planning to get the job done safely providing the right fall protection equipment and training all workers to use the equipment safely Many construction workers perform tasks at a height that requires protection from fall hazards Having a serious injury or death occur at work affects everyone at a worksite A fall can occur in a split second without any time for the worker to react
