Practices and Principles Mark Tunick, 2021-03-09 A Japanese woman living in California attempts parent child suicide an ancient Japanese custom called oyako shinju in order to rid herself of shame upon learning that her husband has a mistress She survives but her two children are drowned in the attempt Since her attempt was made in accordance with the standards of Japanese culture should she be tried by the standards and laws of the United States Are there universally valid moral principles that dictate what is right Or are moral judgments culturally relative ultimately dictated by conventions and practices that vary among societies In Practices and Principles Mark Tunick takes up the debate between universalists and relativists and in political philosophy between communitarians and liberals each of which has roots in an earlier debate between Kant and Hegel Tunick focuses on three case studies promises contract law and the Fourth Amendment issue of privacy In his analysis he rejects both uncritical deference to social practice and draconian adherence to principles when making legal and ethical judgments He argues that we do not always need to choose between abstract principles and social practices Sometimes we appeal to both sometimes we need to appeal to shared social norms and sometimes where there is no ethical community we can appeal only to principles Ultimately Tunick rejects simplified arguments that force us to choose between either practices or principles universalism or relativism and liberalism or communitarianism
