- the different expectations that girls and boys had in this era
- some of the changes that took place in conditions for women.

The Roaring '20s

Many Canadians believed that by 1920 their country was experiencing the dawn of a new era. This era was symbolized by the flapper, the young woman who bobbed her hair and shortened her skirts. Bangles adorned her bare arms and long beads emphasized the slim, straight line of her dress. Corsets were out and flat figures and bright red lipstick were in. She danced the Charleston and the Black Bottom, smoked cigarettes, and even sipped gin from silver flasks. The appearance of this free-spirited figure suggested to some Canadians that the total emancipation of the Canadian woman would soon be a reality.

Actually, equality of any sort was slow to develop. While education and working conditions were slightly better, revolutionary change did not occur. Marriage, housework, and motherhood continued to dominate women's lives. Having the vote did not create a significant break with the past.
