ABSTRACT

Introduction: Women in India are not fully educated on contraception usage. In 2017, a central family planning initiative called Mission Parivar Vikas was launched by the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare (MoHFW).

Aim: This study was conducted among mothers in an urban slum in Kolkata to establish their unmet family planning needs, as well as different factors associated with it.

Materials and Methods: A cross-sectional community-based study was conducted from February 2019 to May 2019 among mothers residing at an urban field practice area (Dhapa UHTC, Kolkata). All mothers of under-five children present in the slum were included in the study (n=246). Pre-designed, pre-tested, semi-structured schedule with both open and closed-ended questions were used.

Results: The majority of the mothers were Muslim, of whom 37.8% were below 18 years of age. Among the mothers, 46.3% were adolescent mothers (<18 years). Around 78% mothers desired two children. Around 70.7% mothers were using some form of contraceptives at the time of the study. Out of 246 subjects, unmet family planning needs were found in 72 (29.3%) subjects. Significant association was found between unmet family planning needs and age, education level, socio-economic status, knowledge of the ideal age of marriage, and the number of children desired.

Conclusion: The study revealed the unmet needs for contraception in an urban slum. However, the practice assessed by the study was actually reported practice and therefore, recall bias might be present. Further studies are recommended in other areas and different settings in order to extrapolate the study findings.

INTRODUCTION

Kolkata, the capital of West Bengal has a population of more than 14 million which makes it India's third most populous metropolitan city according to the 2011 census [1]. At least one-third of the population lives in around 5,500 registered and unregistered slums. Majority of them have minimal access to essential services. The messages about family planning practices do not reach all of the urban slums. Many of them have not even heard about the available modern contraceptives or spacing methods in spite of the fact that the majority of them desire a small family and have a positive attitude towards contraception. The acceptance level of different contraceptive methods also varies with religion, caste, culture, socio-economic status, and literacy level.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) has indicated that desired number of children, spacing and timing of birth can be attained by worthy family planning practices. This can be achieved through the use of family planning methods and the treatment of involuntary infertility. The ability of a mother to limit and space her pregnancies has a direct impact on her health, well-being, and outcome of each pregnancy [2].

In India, according to the National Family Health Survey-4 (NFHS-4) data, unmet family planning needs in urban populations of India was 12.1% and unmet need for spacing was 5.1% [3]. In 2017, a central family planning initiative called Mission Parivar Vikas was launched by the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare (MoHFW), Government of India. Recent data suggests that 145 High Focus Districts (HFDs) in seven states (Uttar Pradesh, Bihar, Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand and Assam) were identified based on Total Fertility Rate (TFR). HFDs exhibiting a TFR >3.0 were included in the survey. These HFDs constitute 44% of the Indian population. Only 22% and 40% of India's protected couples and those with unmet family planning needs, reside in these HFDs, respectively.

These HFDs have substantial impact on maternal and child health indicators accounting for 25-30% of maternal deaths, 50% of infant deaths, and a high percentage of adolescent mothers [4].

From this perspective, the study was conducted among mothers residing in an urban slum in Kolkata with the objective of elucidating their unmet family planning needs, as well as different factors associated with it.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

A cross-sectional community-based study was conducted from February 2019 to May 2019 among mothers residing at an urban field practice area (Dhapa UHTC, Kolkata).

Inclusion criteria: All mothers of under-five children residing in the slum were included in the study.

Exclusion criteria: Those who did not agree to participate in the study and those couples who were not available during visit were excluded.

From the eligible couple register maintained at the UHTC, only those eligible couples who had at least one child less than 5 years were short listed for the study. Among them those who did not agree to participate in the study and those couples who was not available during visit were excluded. So, the final sample size were 246. Among the eligible couples only the wives were interviewed for the study. Total 246 mothers were interviewed in their local language with pre-designed, pre-tested, semi-structured schedule with both open and closed-ended questions. Confidentiality was assured to all the mothers and they were given a brief description of the study. The study was approved (EC approval no: CNMC/6) by the Institutional Ethics Committee (IEC) and informed consent was taken from all the mothers prior to initiating the study. In the present study, 18 years age was taken as the ideal age of marriage as per the Honourable Supreme Court.
