

1.3 Interpret Relevant Legislation and its Application to Conveyancing Practice

One of the primary and significant tasks performed by those who must interpret and apply the law is the conveyancing process. Conveyancing involves the law, namely, all of legislation, custom and tradition applied to such the subject of transferring property from one party to another.

Acting Parties in a Contract

In any transfer of real property, the parties involved are the transferor (the party who is transferring the property) and the transferee (the party who is receiving the property). The parties involved in a conveyancing transaction are the grantor (the party who is transferring the property) and the grantee (the party who is receiving the property).

It is important to note the conveyancing process is a legal activity involving the following:

1. The transfer of the property from the grantor to the grantee.
2. The transfer of the property from the grantor to the grantee.

Conveyancing is a legal activity involving the transfer of real property from one party to another. The law governing the conveyancing process is found in the Real Property Act, 1908 (RPA). The RPA provides the legal framework for the conveyancing process and sets out the requirements for the transfer of real property.
