

Japanese Occupation of the Philippines (1942-1945)

The Japanese occupation of the Philippines occurred between 1942 and 1945, when the Japanese Empire occupied the Commonwealth of the Philippines during World War II. On December 8, 1941, just a few hours after the attack on Pearl Harbor, the Japanese launched air strikes on Philippine airfields. This marked the beginning of their invasion and occupation. The Fall of Manila happened less than a month after the invasion, the Japanese forces captured Manila, the capital city of the Philippines, in early January 1942. After the surrender of the American and Filipino troops in Bataan on April 9, 1942, it was marked as the Death March of Bataan wherein the Japanese subjected them to a brutal forced march to prison camps. Many prisoners died due to harsh conditions, brutality, and lack of food and water. Despite the occupation, Filipinos organized underground called the Guerrilla resistance groups throughout the country. These guerrilla movements fought against Japanese forces, conducted sabotage, gathered intelligence, and provided support to the Allied forces. The establishment of a Puppet Government in October 1943, called the Second Philippine Republic, with Jose P. Laurel as its president. However, it lacked significant support from the Filipinos. In October 1944, the Battle of Leyte Gulf took place, considered one of the largest naval battles in history. The Allied forces, led by General Douglas MacArthur, successfully defeated the Japanese navy, marking a major turning point in the war. In February

1945, the Battle of Manila occurred, which resulted in the liberation of Manila by the United States. The battle caused significant damage to the city and many civilian casualties. On August 15, 1945, Japan officially surrendered to the Allied forces, ending the occupation. The Philippines then underwent a period of transition, eventually leading to the establishment of the Republic of the Philippines in 1946, marking the end of the Japanese occupation and the beginning of a new era for the country.
