

WHAT IS ENERGY?

Energy is the capacity that objects or substances have to perform work or produce changes in the environment.

It is a force that drives and enables things to happen.

There are different forms of energy, such as kinetic energy (related to motion), potential energy (stored in objects), thermal energy (related to heat), and electrical energy (produced by electric current).

Energy is essential for the functioning of our daily lives, from turning on a light to powering vehicles or heating our homes. It is an indispensable resource for the development and well-being of society.
