Abstract: This study aims to develop a comprehensive framework to measure the financial reporting quality (FRQ) of licensed financial institutions (LFIs) in Sri Lanka and assess the FRQ of the fair value accounting regime over the historical cost regime. This study uses a quantitative design based on positivism to assess the FRQ. The sample size comprised 44 LFIs where the historical cost and fair value accounting regimes were assessed considering annual reports published in 2011 and 2021 respectively. Structured content analysis is used to collect data to assign a quantitative or numeric value for each item to capture FRQ dimensions under the conceptual framework. A comprehensive set of FRQ indices were developed to assess FRQ and the indices were compared using a t-test across historical cost and fair value accounting regimes. The analysis reveals that the FRQ of LFIs in Sri Lanka has improved significantly in the fair value accounting regime over the historical cost regime. However, regulatory disclosure requirements adhering to the strengthened corporate governance regime were also effective during the transition period. Therefore, the IFRS adoption may not be the sole contributing factor to the improved FRQ in the fair value accounting regime. Hence, future studies may focus on assessing FRQ considering fair value-based earnings management practices and extend the scope of FRQ to evolving financial technology which may play an important role in FRQ.

1. Introduction

Licensed financial institutions (LFIs) of Sri Lanka commenced adopting International financial reporting standards (IFRS) or compatible local standards which are based on fair values from 01.01.2012<sup>1</sup>. Financial reporting quality (FRQ) is an important prerequisite for financial intermediaries where agency conflicts between owners and creditors are intensified. The concept of FRQ does not mean only containing financial information but also non-financial, which will be useful in making an economic decision [1, 2]. Jayasekara et al. [3] suggest that the quality reporting aspect is important in the Sri Lankan context because the adoption of fair value-based reporting standards provides opportunities for the users of financial information to assess how it has translated FRQ dimensions over historical cost accounting to influence the users and to attract more foreign direct investments where the investors expect a high-quality financial reporting regime.

Iqbal et al. [4] suggest that intense product market competition enhances the FRQ. On the other hand, FRQ may lead to product market competition which is beneficial for all stakeholders.

The literature on FRQ provides two approaches. The first group considers both accrual-based and real earnings management practices to measure reporting quality using various econometric models [5, 6]. The second group focuses on measuring FRQ using the qualitative characteristics of reporting in terms of accounting conceptual frameworks [7–10]. Tran [11] also shows that qualitative characteristics play a more significant role in reducing information asymmetry than earnings quality. These studies have used the IASB (2008)<sup>2</sup> framework which has been replaced by the IASB (2018)<sup>3</sup> conceptual framework. The literature on quality reporting has developed around the IASB (2008) framework [7–10]. However, these studies have not considered the updated conceptual framework as a comprehensive study. In the global context, there is no comprehensive study which captures all the
