Scientific Inquiry Cycle: Review

Science helps communities solve problems by applying knowledge and inventing things. Often "fixed" with a local issue such as water quality or waste management, using science to make or improve solutions can have a positive impact. Understanding the problem fully, including its causes and effects, is the first step in finding an effective solution.

Designing solutions begins by considering various constraints, such as budget, time, and safety concerns. Community members from a particular region face challenges, however, and it is important to weigh these trade-offs carefully. For example, creating materials for a house that may affect its cost and ease of use, cannot influence the effectiveness of the solution.

After identifying a solution, determining how it works, what constraints affected it, and any compromises that have already been or should involve on the way. Communication, using design models, and reflecting on the results of the solution are important steps. The process of testing, sharing, and evaluating locally encourages responsible decision-making and helps communities thrive.

2. What does determining constraints in a solution help with?
 - a. Finding the constraints of the solution
 - b. Evaluating the solution for safety and safety
 - c. Deciding how to avoid
 - d. Determining what the solution has no costs
3. Which is an example of a trade-off?
 - a. Finding a solution with no cost
 - b. Spending money on one thing
 - c. The time and money spent
 - d. Using unbreakable materials
4. Why is it important to consider constraints?
 - a. To avoid not being in compliance
 - b. To make ideas clearer
 - c. To finish the problem by comparing
 - d. To avoid choosing materials

02. Mark if the statement is True (T) or False (F).

1. A solution made after one failed attempt is always better than the first attempt.

Answer for each question.

1. How does identifying a solution help in the scientific process?

2. Why must this be considered in designing a solution?

3. What might happen when creating a new idea?

4. How does science help communities thrive?
