

Down the Rabbit Hole: Tips for Owning a Pet Rabbit

Although cats and dogs are the first companion animals people usually think of, rabbits tend to become increasingly popular around spring time and the Easter holiday. However, lots of people don't properly research what owning and taking care of a rabbit entails and oftentimes the rabbit gets abandoned or left at shelters. Below is some general information on what to know about rabbits and some tips on how to better your rabbit parenting skills.

Fun Rabbit Toys to Provide

- Paper bags and cardboard boxes for crawling inside, scratching, and chewing
- Boxes full of shredded paper, junk mail, magazines, straw, or other organic materials for digging and shredding
- Cat and/or baby toys that roll or can be tossed
- Nudge-and-roll toys like large rubber balls, empty boxes, and small tins
- Toys with ramps and lookouts for climbing and viewing
- A hand towel for bunching and scooting
- Untreated wood, twigs, and logs that have been aged for at least 3 months
- Things to jump up on (they like to be in high places)

WHAT TO KNOW

- Domestic rabbits tend to live between 8 – 12 years
- Baby rabbits are called kits (short for kittens), not bunnies!
- They require a very specific diet (pellets, hay, fresh vegetables, and water)
- Rabbits need an exotic veterinarian, which is often different from a small animal vet
- They don't need vaccinations like other domestic pets but do still need yearly check-ups
- Rabbits require just as much space as a dog or cat, even as much as free range of your home. Their home-base or sleeping area should also be at least 4 – 6 times the size of your rabbit
- They are social animals and require human and other rabbit companionship
- Rabbits are chewers!

OWNER TIPS

- First and foremost, do your own thorough research on owning domestic rabbits! Make sure every person involved is ready for the responsibility, especially young kids for whom the novelty can wear off quickly.

- Secure a veterinarian: exotic vets, or small animal vets who will also work on rabbits, are few and far between and often more expensive since rabbits are considered a specialty. Finding emergency after-hour vets may be even more difficult.
- Spay/neuter your rabbit! They live longer, happier, and healthier lives when spayed or neutered.
