and the Forest Industries: Past and Future E.G. Richards,2012-12-06 In analysing the development and achievements of Polish forestry and forest industries over the last four decades it is necessary to take into consideration the situation prevailing after the end of the Second World War when these sectors of the national economy were starting their activities First of all it is necessary to consider the effects of the war such as a the harvesting from the forests of the present Polish territory of 3 about 200 million m of merchantable wood which is equal to the normal harvest over a 12 year period b the destruction of over half the woodworking industrial potential In consequence the forested area inside the new Polish boundaries amounted 40 years ago only to 20 8 per cent of the whole area of the country There has been a continuing process of increasing the forested area of the country although at a diminishing rate In 1986 the forest area amounted to 27 7 per cent of the land surface that is to 8 7 million ha an increase of over 2 million ha in 40 years Intensive afforestation performed regardless of the ownership category of the land by the State forest service was aimed primarily at making good the losses in the forested area and the rational use of land not fit for agricultural purposes The Forest Sector World Bank,1991 The Future of the Forest Sector Alastair I. Fraser,1987 European Forest Sector Outlook Study 1960-2000-2020 United Nations. FAO/ECE Trade Development and Timber Division. Timber Branch,2005 This study prepared jointly by FAO and UNECE sets out data on long term trends and projections for future developments in the forestry sector for 38 countries in western and eastern Europe including the three Baltic states and four major CIS countries including Russia covering the years 1960 to 2020 It is based on scientific analysis and covers forest resources and the production trade and consumption of roundwood sawnwood panels pulp and paper as well as the outlook for non wood products and forest services It also examines the links with other sectoral policies such as energy environmental trade and rural development policies and sets out a number of policy conclusions and recommendations Oregon Forest Sector Contributions & Potential E.D. Hovee & Company,2004 Forest sector contribution to national economies 2015 Li, Y., Mei, B., Linhares-Juvenal, T., Formenton Cardoso, N., Tshering, C.,2022-10-06 The forest sector is a key sector for the development of a circular bioeconomy and achievement of the SDGs Clarity on the dimension of the benefits generated by wood production including through other sectors of the economy can help build the case to support a sustainable growth of the forest sector with increased sustainable management of natural and planted forests and efficient and inclusive value chains Analysis of national input output matrix and calculation of economic multipliers can provide insights on the real magnitude of forest contributions to the national economies and highlight where policies towards sustainability can have a greater impact This report presents the total economic contributions of the forest sector to national economies around the globe based on estimations of the forest sector direct indirect and induced effects on the economy derived from the national accounts input output matrixes with the most recent data available 2015 The results can help stakeholders to understand the importance and multiplier effects of the forest sector to the national economy in a quantifiable way Global Forest

Resources Assessment 2025 Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, FAO completed its first assessment of the world's forest resources in 1948. Since then the Global Forest Resources Assessment (GFRA) has evolved into a comprehensive evaluation of forest resources and their condition management and uses covering all the thematic elements of sustainable forest management. This is the latest of these assessments, examining the status of and trends in forest resources over the period 1990-2025, drawing on the efforts of hundreds of experts worldwide. The results of GFRA 2025 are available in several formats including this report, an interactive story on key findings, and an online database at <https://fra.data.fao.org>

Globalization and Structural Change in the U.S. Forest Sector, 2007      Contribution of the Forestry Sector to National Economies, 1990-2011 Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2018-05-23. This paper is the second update of FAO's original report on this topic. It presents information about the contribution of the forestry sector to national economies at the global, regional, and country levels. The study presents the status and trends of the forestry sector's contribution, total employment, value added, and export earnings in the sector, and analyses the driving forces behind these trends. It updates the data and analysis to the year 2011. The study gives a reasonable estimation of the general trends in the sector at the regional and global level. However, at the level of individual countries, the use of imputed values for some figures (i.e. FAO estimates rather than published statistics) should be noted, and these estimates should be treated with caution.

Innovation in Forestry Gerhard Weiss, Davide Pettenella, Pekka Ollonqvist, Bill Slee, 2011. Innovation in Forestry: Territorial and Value Chain Relationships. Edited by Gerhard Weiss, Davide Pettenella, Pekka Ollonqvist, and Bill Slee. Innovation is increasingly recognized as a key factor in environmental protection and sustainable development in forestry and forest-based industries. This volume provides a comprehensive theoretical foundation for the analysis of innovation processes and policies in a traditional rural sector, as well as presenting empirical analyses of innovation processes from major innovation areas. Innovative solutions are analysed in wood-related value chains, including timber frame construction, furniture, bio-energy, and forest transportation. Territorial services of the forest sector are examined, including various types of forest ecosystem services such as carbon sequestration, non-wood products, and recreation. Innovation in Forestry is essential reading for researchers and policy makers in forestry and environmental sciences.      Information Technology and the Forest Sector Lauri Hetemäki, Sten Nilsson, 2005      The Global Forest Sector, 1987      A Forestry Sector Study, 2009

The Forest Sector in the Green Economy United Nations, 2010      International Forest Sector Institutions and Policy Instruments for Europe Josephine Bauer, 2006      Forest Strategy Michael Gane, 2007-06-28. In the past, lack of understanding at the nexus between the forest sector on the one hand and strategic management on the other has led to failures in many countries to realise the potential that forest sector development offers. This important new book adopts a more holistic approach to propose a new theoretical framework for this once traditional sector, one which reconciles current thinking in strategic management with natural resource management. The book will provide a valuable resource for both forestry professionals particularly those in managerial positions in government departments and forest services throughout the world and for advanced students and researchers exploring the issues around forest sector administration The latter will include researchers from a range of backgrounds including forestry ecology geography conservation rural development economics forest or environmental policy social studies and public affairs and will be of particular interest to groups adopting an interdisciplinary approach to forestry issues
