

Basic Elements of a Sanitation Program for Food Processing and Food Handling ¹

Ronald H. Schmidt²

This document covers current definitions and practices of food handling and processing for institutions and commercial enterprises.

Background

A three-word definition of Food Sanitation is protection from contamination. With this in mind, all functions and operations must be included in a sanitation program. All food products must be protected from contamination from receiving (and before) through distribution. Sanitation is a dynamic and ongoing function and cannot be sporadic or something that can be turned on once a day, once a week, etc. Therefore, another definition could be: "sanitation is a way of life".

Temperature Control

The primary rule of sanitation is to pay strict attention to food temperatures.

- Avoid prolonged holding in the danger zone (from 40°F to 140°F).

- Provide functional thermometers to all food storage boxes.
- Monitor the temperature on serving lines on a regular frequency.
- Thaw frozen foods under refrigeration or under cold water.
- Do not thaw foods at room temperature.

Hygiene and Personnel Practices

Regardless of type of processing or food handling operation, the number one consideration in food sanitation is people. It is people who set the rules, follow the rules, and also break the rules of sanitation. A sanitation program is as good as the attitude, willingness, and efforts of people. That is why the most important aspect of a sanitation program is ongoing personnel training.

It is essential that the full meaning of sanitation and its wide economic scope be accepted by everyone concerned in the food system-including management.
