

NORTH NORFOLK – INTRODUCTION

The North Norfolk coast truly is a special place. With its vast sandy beaches, pretty villages and tiny harbours bobbing with boats, many consider it the jewel in the crown of East Angles' 500-mile diverse coastline and it certainly offers some of its finest locations for photography.

The coast begins and ends with cliffs, rising to the west with the unique red and white striped cliffs of Mundesley and concluding with the soft brown topped cliffs that underline from Weybourne to the coast of Cosham with its dunes for Victorian pier, and beyond.

Stretching our wide expanse Norfolk also and bordered by the cliffs is around 45 miles of completely beautiful and consistently better views. If you don't want to miss any of the views, you can actually walk that distance (and beyond) along the Norfolk Coast Path.

One of the characteristics of this part of the world is the beaches Mundesley, Burnham, Southham-Deby Dunham, Holham and Wells, amongst others all have vast, pristine sandy beaches fringed by dunes covered in sweeping grass. At low tide, seen from a vantage point atop the dunes the sea is just a band of silver and blue, shimmering in the distance.

Another common sight along the Norfolk Coast Path is the saltmarsh, huge areas, teeming with life, created by a regular rise and fall of tides and meandering rivers making their circuitous way out to sea. Dotted along the coast are pretty villages like Day, Walsby and the Burnhams all on the banks of these rivers. Thanks to sitting these pretty clusters of tiny cottages and creaky harbours are often now some way inland from the coast when they were first built.

Nature reserves make up large parts of the coast here. Looked after by The Norfolk Wildlife Trust, the RSPB and the National Trust, these reserves protect important habitats found on the saltmarsh, wetlands, mudflats and beaches and preserve the unspoilt beauty of the area.
