Encounters With Aging:

Encounters with Aging Margaret M. Lock, 1994-01-20 Margaret Lock explicitly compares Japanese and North American medical and political accounts of female middle age to challenge Western assumptions about menopause She uses ethnography interviews statistics historical and popular culture materials and medical publications to produce a richly detailed account of Japanese women s lives The result offers irrefutable evidence that the experience and meanings even the endocrinological changes associated with female midlife are far from universal Rather Lock argues they are the product of an ongoing dialectic between culture and local biologies Japanese focus on middle aged women as family members and particularly as caretakers of elderly relatives They attach relatively little importance to the end of menstruation seeing it as a natural part of the aging process and not a diseaselike state heralding physical decline and emotional instability Even the symptoms of midlife are different Japanese women report few hot flashes for example but complain frequently of stiff shoulders Articulate passionate and carefully documented Lock s study systematically undoes the many preconceptions about aging women in two distinct cultural settings Because it is rooted in the everyday lives of Japanese women it also provides an excellent entree to Japanese society as a whole Aging and menopause are subjects that have been closeted behind our myths fears and misconceptions Margaret Lock s cross cultural perspective gives us a critical new lens through which to examine our assumptions
