Student	Peers' Activities	Student's Performance	Skills or Support Needed	Adaptations
John	Peers take out pencils and paper from backpacks.	John takes out pencil and paper from his backpack.	None	None
	Peers listen to music	John places his fingers in his ears.	John may be sensitive to the loudness or intensity of the music; requires dimming of loudness.	Peer tutor will prompt John to use his earplugs while listening.
	Peers "free write" about their feelings or thoughts while listening to the music selection.	John writes incomplete sentences, without any adjectives.	John needs assistance in identifying adjectives to add. John needs support in composing complete sentences.	Provide John with a word bank of "emotion words" from which he can select when writing. Provide John a cloze (fill-in-the-blank) template for writing sentences (e.g., "This music makes me feel ____.")
Amanda	Peers take out pencils and paper from backpacks.	Amanda takes out her AlphaSmart, but does not turn it on.	Amanda requires support in task initiation.	Peer tutor will point to "start" button to remind Amanda to turn on AlphaSmart.
	Peers identify and correct grammatical and spelling errors.	Amanda sits quietly and does not type the sentence.	Amanda needs to be able to identify errors and type her responses.	Peer tutor will help Amanda navigate to blank page in English 8 file on Alphasmart. Provide Amanda a sentence strip with most errors already corrected, and appropriate errors highlighted with choices provided (e.g., i or li).

ries are important and should be shared with others. Learning outcomes for Amanda and John, within this unit of study, will be based on their individualized education program (IEP) goals, curricular activities to facilitate meaningful participation, and Mr. Jackson's content expertise. Through collaboration, Amanda's teachers have decided that she will be responsible for reading the novel modified to her level (see Figure 2), which contains pictures with one-sentence statements, answering appropriate questions about the novel to demonstrate comprehension, and learning key vocabulary by matching words and pictures. The teachers have also decided that Amanda will complete the memoir assignment. Ms. Lawson will ask Amanda's parents for photographs and some memorable stories, and Amanda will write about these in her own words, using word banks, scribes, and other assistive technology as necessary. Similarly, John will be responsible for reading a version of the novel at a fourth-grade readability level (see Figure 2), with abstract concepts

Talk sheets are used as a joint planning session, in which the general education teacher shares plans for the upcoming week, lesson, or unit, including worksheets or chapters that may need to be adapted as well as any tests or long-term assignments.
