

Functions of a Complex Variable

In this chapter, we will study functions of a complex variables. The most interesting functions on the complex plane are those that are holomorphic. The most important holomorphic functions are the exponential and the logarithm function. Holomorphicity is the complex analogue of differentiability, but for various reasons, which we shall study in great detail, a function being holomorphic is far more restrictive than the function being differentiable.

The focal point of this chapter will be power series and functions that have local power series expansions, i.e., analytic functions. The reason for this is two-fold:

- (i). The most important functions that arise in practice are analytic.
- (ii). All holomorphic functions are analytic!

The second point above will be one of the central theorems we will prove in this course.

We make some notation remarks. We will be considering functions $f : U \rightarrow \mathbb{C}$, where $U \subset \mathbb{C}$ is an open set. We will usually write $f = u + iv$, where $u := \operatorname{Re}f$ and $v := \operatorname{Im}f$ are the real and imaginary parts of f . Note that f is continuous iff u and v are continuous.

We begin with the definition and basic properties of holomorphic functions. We then present the theory of power series and study various properties of analytic functions.

1 Holomorphic functions

1.1 Definitions and examples

Definition 1. We say that f is \mathbb{C} -differentiable at the point $a \in U$ if

$$\lim_{h \rightarrow 0} \frac{f(a+h) - f(a)}{h} \rightarrow 0.$$

In the case, we denote the limiting value by $f'(a)$ and call it the derivative of a .

If f is \mathbb{C} -differentiable at each point of U , then we say that f is holomorphic on U . The set of holomorphic mappings on U is denoted $H(U)$.

A function that is holomorphic on the whole of \mathbb{C} is called an entire function.

Remarks.

- a) If f is differentiable at a then f is continuous at a .
- b) If f and g are differentiable at a then so are $f \pm g$, cf ($c \in \mathbb{C}$) and fg and the usual rules of differentiation apply. The proofs of these facts follows mutatis mutandis from the proofs of the real case.
- c) If f is differentiable at a and $f(a) \neq 0$, then $\frac{1}{f}$ is differentiable at a and its derivative at a is $-\frac{f'(a)}{f(a)^2}$.
