uzzaman would dictate at speed to his students who acted as scribes He had no books for reference and the writing of religious works was of course forbidden They were all written therefore in the mountains and out in the countryside Handwritten copies of the treatises or the letters were then made of the originals and these were conveyed to the Nur students and secretly copied out in their houses These copies were passed from village to village and then from town to town with more and more copies being made on the way till eventually they spread throughout Turkey Travel was not easy and Bad uzzaman communicated by letter with those of his students who lived in towns and villages other than Barla Largely in reply to their questions the letters offer important guidance on numerous points of belief and Isl m explained in the light of the Ris la i N r and its way and in the face of the misguidance of the times Indeed they form an important source and authority on many subjects for Muslims today Since some of his students had previously been attached to Sufi orders he sometimes explains the way of the Ris la i N r to them through comparisons with the Sufi way The primary aim of the Ris la i N r is the saving and strengthening of belief Employing both the intellect and the heart Bad uzzaman described it as reality aq qah and Shari a rather than ar qah that is Sufism It is the highway of the Qur an which teaches the true affirmation of divine unity true and certain belief attained in a short time through investigation and the exercise of the reason The direct way to reality and knowledge of Allah which is the way of the Companions of Prophet UWBP through the legacy of prophethood Some of the letters offer guidance and encouragement to the students by answering criticisms and misrepresentations put forward by those antithetical to religion concerning both points of Isl m and Bad uzzaman himself Others expose the plans to corrupt Isl m through the introduction of innovations They show how on the one hand Bad uzzaman was absolutely uncompromising in the face of enemies to religion and on the other his complete fairness and moderateness in adjudicating points of conflict and controversy within Isl m All these illustrate his profound knowledge of many subjects as well as the clarity and power of his style which is based on logic
